

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A network copying system includes at least one host computer and at least one machine unit connected to the host computer through a LAN or the Internet. Each host computer includes a browser for 5 selecting data files and disk copiers through the network. The copying operations can be executed and completed by the remote host computer to copy data thereof to another remote copying unit via the network.